Date: 11/19/09

Recipient: United Technologies Corporation

Type: Contract

Amount: $1,000,004.00

Agency: National Aeronautics and Space Administration

Description: This program is a 24 month effort to identify, design, and perform validation trials on combustor concepts that will meet NASA N+2 NOx emissions goal of 75% below CAEP/6. The combustor cycle conditions will be based on an engine cycle architecture and technology suite consistent with the N+2, 2020 timeframe. The program includes system studies and engine cycle selection, conceptual combustor design and flame tube screening tests of fuel injectors and mixers, and development of enabling combustion system technologies. A multi-injector sector will be designed and fabricated with initial screening tests conducted at the P&W test facility and then with verification testing at the NASA Glenn ASCR facility. The NASA N+2 low NOx combustion technology program will leverage development and test rigs from the TALON programs and will include significant cost share from P&W and UTRC.

Recipient: United Technologies Corporation

Type: Contract

Amount: $2,416,000.00

Agency: Department of the Army

Description: As a part of research on Ultra Low Energy Community Systems the contractor will develop a methodology and a software tool that support an energy master planner by enabling generation, optimization, and selection of the best holistic energy system architectures that meet the demands of ultra low energy Army installations.

Date: 02/22/10

Recipient: United Technologies Corporation

Type: Contract

Amount: $622,178.00

Agency: Department of the Army

Description: United Technologies Research Center (UTRC) shall design and simulate a 5-kWe / 17.6-kWt ORC for mobile 60-kWe diesel engine waste heat recovery applications that uses a non-flammable, near-zero-global-warming-potential fluid (Novec649).

Date: 03/16/10

Recipient: United Technologies Corporation

Type: Grant

Amount: $2,134,698.00

Agency: Department of Energy

Description: Recent academic research has created “synthetic analogue” molecules for elucidation of CA enzyme mechanisms. The bio-mimicking analogue could be modified to harness ultra-fast, stable chemistry in novel, membrane separation for CO2 capture, offering potential for much lower affect on cost of electricity.

Date: 12/15/09

Recipient: United Technologies Corporation

Type: Grant

Amount: $1,816,306.00

Agency: Department of Energy

Description: The United Technologies Research Center (UTRC) proposes to improve the utilization of available energy in geothermal resources and increase the energy conversion efficiency of systems.

Date: 12/29/09

Recipient: United Technologies Corporation

Type: Grant

Amount: $1,191,218.00

Agency: Department of Energy

Description: The United Technologies Research Center (UTRC) proposes to improve the efficiency and output variability of geothermal-based Organic Rankine Cycle (ORC) power production systems.

Date: 01/22/10

Recipient: United Technologies Corporation

Type: Contract

Amount: $864,396.00

Agency: Department of Defense (except military departments)

Description: The objectives of this program are to demonstrate the reductions in building HVAC system energy consumption (3 to 10%), peak power consumption (10 to 15%) and control system installation & commissioning cost (50%) using a wireless sensor network platform and model predictive control algorithms. The demonstration is to be conducted at the US Army Corps of Engineers Construction Engineering Research Laboratory (CERL) site located in Champaign, IL.

Date: 08/12/09

Recipient: United Technologies Corporation

Type: Contract

Amount: $1,854,200.00

Agency: Department of Defense (except military departments)

Description: The objective of this project is to develop the required systems methodology, building physics, and dynamics-based analysis tool set to design and deliver significantly higher energy performance in existing buildings than is achievable by the current retrofit process. The methodology consists of tools for rapid survey, audit, retrofit option analysis, and selection to ensure robust design and operation of buildings. In the first phase of this project, researchers will segment the existing DoD building stock.

Date: 08/12/09

Recipient: United Technologies Corporation

Type: Contract

Amount: $515,195.00

Agency: Department of Defense (except military departments)

Description: United Technologies Research Center in partnership with the Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory propose to demonstrate an automated, model-based, whole building performance monitoring system at two different DoD sites in partnership with the Navy and Air Force.

Date: 08/12/09

Recipient: United Technologies Corporation

Type: Contract

Amount: $1,867,003.00

Agency: Department of Defense (except military departments)

Description: The objective of this project is to develop and demonstrate the integration of renewable energy sources and energy storage with the electrical grid. The technology that will be demonstrated under this project will allow the introduction of dynamically stable, modular, and cost-effective energy micro grids that will operate seamlessly in grid-parallel and off-grid modes. This project focuses on a micro grid demonstration that includes electrical energy sources and loads; however, the technology demonstrated can be extended to integrate multiple electric energy sources and storage.

Date: 08/12/09

Recipient: United Technologies Corporation

Type: Contract

Amount: $1,306,484.00

Agency: Department of Defense (except military departments)

Description: This project will demonstrate the scalability of the advanced building energy management system to different types and sizes of buildings. The advanced building energy management system will be implemented as a software extension to the current AEC ENFORMA Building Diagnostics platform.
